

The Telegraph

The best restaurants in New York

By David Farley, DESTINATION EXPERT
23 MARCH 2018 - 11:25AM

New York is a smokesboard of lip-smackingly good eateries, from the trendy and exotic to the quirky and classic. One minute you could be tucking into boiled chicken feet and spicy pho at a downtown dim sum depot; the next, a sizzling cut in a show-stopping New York steakhouse. Get tasting with Telegraph Travel's New York expert, David Farley.

Chelsea

Legacy Records

Talented chef Ryan Hardy, who also runs the kitchens at hotspots Charlie Bird and Pasquale Jones, cooks up seaside Italian fare at this handsome Art Deco-inspired spot in the new far west Manhattan development called Hudson Yards. The cocktail programme is under the direction of Jeff Bell from lauded cocktail bar P.D.T. (stands for Please Don't Tell) and the wine is under the command of heavily awarded sommelier Arvid Rosengren. The space once housed a legendary recording studio of the same name and the art bedecking the walls reflects the musical heritage.

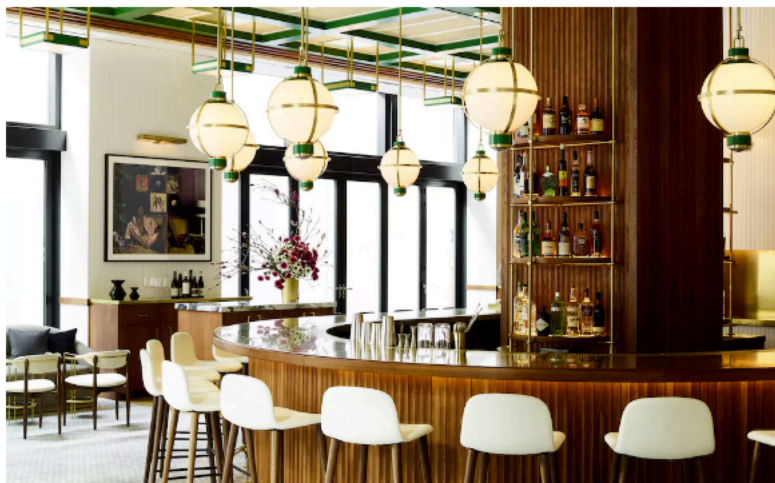

Contact: legacyrecordsnyc.com

Prices: £££

Opening times: Tue-Sat, 5:30pm-11pm

Nearest metro: Hudson Yards

Reservations: Recommended

The art on the walls at Legacy Records reflects the venue's musical heritage as a recording studio